

The whole reason I don't listen to conventional radio is because of the commercials and program content. I prefer to listen to music over commercials and a wider variety than is available on conventional radio. There is a monthly fee for XM Radio to offset the lack of advertising fees. Is this not a free country? Why should the NAB tell me I must listen to what they want, rather than what I want? They are greedy and self-serving and they do not have the right to tell me what to listen to. Perhaps if they offered quality programming with less advertising I might begin to listen to conventional radio again.
